Richard Mojica commented on the Trump administration's imposition of tariffs and how they will impact companies' ability to do business. "Companies are looking for creative ways to mitigate the tariff impact," Mojica said. "That can be looking for alternative sourcing or redesign the product a different way so it is classified under a different heading. All of these techniques are leading up to companies changing the way they are doing things and this has come to a head with Customs rolling out an effort to ensure that companies are not evading these tariffs."
