

Contractor Fraud in Iraq and the FALSE CLAIMS ACT

AN E-SEMINAR SPONSORED BY ANDREWS PUBLICATIONS, A THOMSON WEST BUSINESS

Wednesday, October 17, 2007 • 12:00 - 1:30 PM EST

In recent months there have been many allegations of fraud involving government contracts associated with the invasion of Iraq, but to date only a few False Claims Act cases have been made public. And in the only False Claims Act case to be tried so far, the government declined the case, the whistleblower nevertheless won a $10 million jury verdict, the judge set aside the verdict, and then the government joined the whistleblower on the appeal. What's going on?

Join Alan Grayson, Esq., of Grayson & Kubli and Brian Hill, Esq., of Miller Chevalier as they analyze the current state of the Contractor Fraud in Iraq the False Claims Act and answer these and other important questions:

- Is there a coming wave of False Claims Act lawsuits involving contracts in Iraq?
- Does the False Claims Act apply if no U.S. Taxpayer money is involved?
- Is "presentment" of a false claim to a U.S. Government employee always required under the False Claims Act?
- What is Congress likely to do about all this?
